Annie's Project Offers Education To Women Farmers

Annie's Project, a risk-management education retreat for farm and ranch women, is being offered in June.

The national program, which teaches women about farm management skills, is based on the experiences of a woman named Annie grew up in a small town in Illinois, married a farmer, and spent her lifetime learning how to be his business partner. Annie's Project provides important information for women who live and work in farming.

Topics include risk assessment, business planning, financial statements, family and liability insurance, and farm programs.

Sponsored by the Clemson Institute for Economic and Community Development, the retreat is June 5-8 at the Clemson University Sandhill Research and Education Center in Columbia.

The cost is $125 per person, which includes all workshop materials, lodging (double occupancy), and meals. Private rooms are available for an additional fee.

Registration is required by May 15 and space is limited. Contact Jennifer Boyles at 843-616-0786.

EPA SmartWay® Transport Partnership

The SmartWay Transport Partnership (www.epa.gov/smartway) is a public-private partnership between the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the freight sector. The primary goal of SmartWay is to move more ton-miles of freight with fewer emissions, using less energy, at lower cost.

SmartWay tools enable partners to analyze their environmental performance and fuel use in order to improve efficiency. Through joining SmartWay, companies demonstrate their environmental leadership and commitment to sustainable freight, while gaining broad public and industry recognition. Partners in good standing can use the SmartWay logo. A survey from the 2011 American Shipper report, Environmental Sustainability

Benchmark Study: Leaders Prepare for the "Greening" Supply Chain, ranked SmartWay first among sustainability programs.

Charles Gantt Trucking of Lexington, a SmartWay partner for six years, transports produce and other agricultural products. The company's Midwest accounts manager, Richard Miller states, "Working with SmartWay helps us keep up with technology improvements, increase efficiency, control costs, and meet state no-idling requirements across the country."

SmartWay Partners report freight data to SmartWay annually, using the appropriate Excel-based tracking and assessment tool (shipper, carrier, logistics or multi-modal) provided on the SmartWay website.

Weather Observers Needed

The National Weather Service needs additional weather observers in South Carolina. Anyone with a rain gauge and access to the Internet can collect valuable rainfall data for the Community Collaborative Rain, Hail and Snow Network.

Once a person signs up, he will record his daily rainfall. The information is used by meteorologists, climatologists, engineers, and consultants.

One of the uses for the data is drought forecasting.

Requirements for being a weather observer:

- * Access to the Internet to enter data at www.cocorahs.org
- * An official-type rain gauge, available from the website
- * A good site as free of trees and obstructions as possible for the rain gauge
- * Completion of a simple online training course
- * Daily recording of data between 6 and 9 a.m.

To participate go to www.cocorahs.org. or call (803)-360-1522.

"Farmland," the movie

If you're like me, you enjoy a good movie. Some because of the entertainment factor, some because of the historical perspective. Some because the story told makes you think a little more than otherwise.

A lot can be said for a story that accurately conveys the subject, and the movie "Farmland" is looking to be a terrific endorsement for the way of life of farmers.

The movie, a feature-length documentary by Academy Award winning director James Moll, offers an intimate glimpse into the lives of six young farmers and ranchers across the country. It had its debut at several prestigious film festivals in various cities, and I am excited that it will be shown in Greenville next month.

The stories in "Farmland" of these young farmers are heart-warming, and they ring true for all of us connected to farming. The film asks the question, "What does the public want to know about food production?" That and other concerns are answered through the eyes of the next generation of farmers.

Just watching the trailer for the movie brings back many memories of my early years on our farm. As these young farmers—most in their 20s—point out, each generation is a little further removed from the farm. When I was growing up almost everyone in the community of Bowman was involved in farming. Now statistics show that fewer than 1 percent of the U.S. population are farmers. South Carolina is fortunate to have many more farmers than most states, with agribusiness as our No. 1 industry.

The core of farming remains the same as it was 50 or 100 years ago. We depend upon Mother Nature. Another of the young farmers in the movie says, "We are all at the mercy of the weather. A few less inches of rain means the difference between a good crop and no crop." That's so true, and it's the reason so many South Carolina farmers are putting in irrigation.

Technology allows us to produce more crops on less land. While high-tech farming is essential, it comes with a high price tag. The old one-and two-row tractor pulled implements have been replaced by six-and eight-row equipment. A new cotton picker looks like a small house moving through the field. Farmers need to plant a much bigger acreage to justify the expense of that new equipment, with its GPS-steered tractor and the 16-row planter behind it.

"Farmland" portrays both the hard work and uncertainty of farming, along with its rewards. From the older farmer who claims to have been broke more times than he can remember, to the young farmer who puts his kids on the tractor with him, the message of farming comes through loud and clear: it's a labor of love as well as a way of life.

To be successful, today's farmers must invest heavily in equipment and technology. Although sitting in the cab of a huge John Deere 6650 is a lifetime away from walking behind a mule pulling a plow, the end result is the same. Farmers are producing our food and feeding the world.

This movie isn't fluff or a feel-good story—it is reality. Director James Moll has won numerous awards for his non-fiction films. This one is sanctioned by the U.S. Farmers and Ranchers Alliance, which consists of about 80 farmer-and rancher-led organizations whose mission is to increase consumer confidence in today's agriculture.

To quote the director: "In 'Farmland,' audiences will hear thoughts and opinions about agriculture, but not from me, and not from a narrator. They're from the mouths of the farmers and ranchers themselves."

One of the young farmers sums up the movie by saying, "I live for the future, and I farm for the future. It's about the next generation."

When this movie is shown in Greenville on May 8, I hope you'll come to see it!

USC Equestrian Team wins SEC championship

No. 1 ranked South Carolina beat No. 2 ranked Georgia on March 29 to win the 2014 SEC Equestrian Championship. The equestrian team becomes the University of South Carolina's first team to win back-to-back SEC Championships.

In the Southeastern Conference equestrian championship, riders compete in four divisions, two western, and two English. Five riders go head-to-head on horses they have never ridden. Each rider has only four minutes to warm up on the mount she has drawn. The rides are judged individually.

Both western horsemanship and western reining are scored on various maneuvers in a precise set of patterns. Hunt seat equitation on the flat evaluates the rider's ability to execute a complex series of movements at precise areas in the arena. In hunt seat equitation over fences, each horse jumps a course and the rider is judged on consistency and smoothness.

Of the 39 members of the USC equestrian team, only four are from South Carolina. Riders are recruited from all over the country, just like football or other team sports.

The USC team members who competed were junior Katherine Schmidt, sophomore Samantha Smith, junior Alexa Anthony, senior Johnna Letchworth, junior Sam Chiodo, sophomore Sarah Bouchard, and junior Adele Norton. Letchworth earned her second Most Outstanding Player award of the weekend in western horsemanship, and Anthony earned Most Outstanding Player honors in equitation on the flat.

"I couldn't be any prouder of our girls today for the way they competed," South Carolina head coach Boo Major said. "Any time you win a championship, it's certainly a special moment, but the way this team has carried itself this year and the way they've committed themselves to winning, it was nice to see it pay off today."

At a reception Saturday night at One Wood Farm, Blythewood Mayor Mike Ross unveiled a sign designating the town as the official home of the USC Equestrian Team. One Wood Farm is their headquarters.

South Carolina's next competition will be the 2014 NCEA National Championships, which run April 17-19 in Waco, Texas.

Innovative conservation projects may apply for grants

Applications for SC Conservation Innovation Grants are due May 5. The grants help projects that demonstrate innovative approaches to conserving private lands. The total project cost may not exceed $75,000, with up to 50 percent of the project eligible for funding.

Proposals should focus on nutrient management, energy conservation, soil health, wildlife, water quality, water management, farm bill program outreach, air quality, silvopasture (the coexistence of forestry and grazing animals), or forestry. The projects can be up to three years in length.

Grants have been awarded to projects dealing with feral hogs, drought-resistant grazing, a poultry operation for a children's home, and multi-species cover crops.

For complete information, call (803) 765-5685, email evelyn.whitesides@sc.usmulda.gov, or visit the SC Conservation Innovation Grants webpage.

Generally, an operation that owns a fleet and ships more than 50 percent of its freight on that fleet should join as a carrier. If the operation has substantial shipping with other carriers, SmartWay recommends that the operation also join as a shipper, but it is not required.

See presentations from the 2013 South Carolina SmartWay Workshop, co-sponsored by the South Carolina Trucking Association (SCTA), the South Carolina Department of Health and Control (SCDHEC) and EPA, at <http://www.sctrucking.org/presentations>.
